Opposed the Change.

Opposed the Change.

Manager Bayly of the garbage service also appeared before the Commissioners to argue against a change in the garbage regulations. The changes proposed by the health officer are that the garbage con tractor shall divide his collection service that a proposed to the argument of the proposed to the proposed by the proposed to tractor shall divide his collection service into a morning and afternoon service, limiting each to two hours. In that way the householders may know exactly what time to expect the collector, and need not keep their alley gates open unnecessarily. Manager Bayly opposed this as unjust. He did not see how such an arrangement could benefit anyone. The present arrangement was working well, and he saw no good reason for changing it. The health officer explained that by the terms of the contractor's bid he agreed to such an arrangement, and said that he did not propose to recommend that such a rule be enforced this year, the object of the hearing being merely to give the contractor notice of what he was to expect next year of what he was to expect next year of what he was to expect next year.

sideration.

Attention was also called to the recommendation of the health officer that collectors be required to go into houses, but not through them in collecting garbage. This did not strike the Commissioners favorably, and it was evident that they would not approve that recommendation. At the conclusion of the hearing the Commissioners reserved their decision.

Grade Crossing Accidents.

Chief Clerk Sylvester of the police department is having a statement prepared for Chairman Frank Hume of the committee of the board of trade to be used at the grade crossing meeting. This statement, which will be completed this afternoon, will show the number of grade crossing accidents that have occurred since June 30, 1842. While the statement had not been completed at 3 o'clock this afternoon, it is certain that it will show a large number of accidents and a number of deaths resulting therefrom. The statement will be of interest to persons who understand the dangers attending these crossings, and it is more than probable that car lines will also be shown in this statement.

Caused by the Bicycle Hump.

Young Waterstraw was riding bars as if he were racing, in the fashion bars as if he were racing, in the fashion so generally affected by bicyclists. His eyes were turned toward the ground, and he could not see where he was going. The canal bridge was up, and the wheelman race straight to the brink, over it and into the water. He was drowned. His deatn seems to be the direct result of his manner of sitting on his wheel.

The Telltale Trunk.

E. Murphy, a magman at the Benning crossing of the Baltimore and Potomac railroad, met with a painful and perhaps serious accident while flagging a train. He stood too near the moving train, and was struck by the engine. His face was painfully cut and bruised and his left wrist broken. The injured man was brought to the city on a train and taken to Providence Hospital in the fourth-precinct patrol wagon. The Telltale Trunk.

From the New York Herald.

The trunk that was hustled into the hotel the other day before breakfast was in construction an ordinary, smart, new, mediumsized trunk. Yet people lingered on the walks and gazed at it, and smiled, and looked pleased at each other as the grinning baggage man took it down from the heap. They stopped across the way on 36th street and watched him. Even as far as Broadway the infection spread, and the public generally approved of this trunk.

For it had dainty white satin ribbons tied in big bows on the handles. There were other still daintier bows of the same innocent material attached to the lock, and hugging the slate, and kissing the cold from plates and caressing the solid corners. An Actress' Trunk.
